

One-day simulation:

International Relations
Conflict Studies
Area Studies

Experience the intricacies of international conflict
For groups of up to 25 participants, our one-day conflict simulations provide participants with the opportunity to experience the complexity of a particular international political conflict.

 12 – 24

 1+ day(s)

 English

In our conflict-simulations participants take on the roles of world leaders and engage in high level decision-making and diplomatic processes. Participants are challenged to practice individual skills, such as adaptability, resilience and analytical capabilities. Our conflict simulations are facilitated by a multidisciplinary team of experts in International Relations.

Learning objectives

Our conflict simulations enable participants to:

- Gain in-depth knowledge about pressing international and regional issues affecting world politics
- Create a better understanding of diplomatic reality and political impasse
- Discover the structure of conflict and potential resolution modalities
- Practise conflict resolution techniques in a safe learning environment
- Experience the complexity of information asymmetry
- Improve negotiations and mediation skills

Further information

The Pax Ludens Foundation
Zeestraat 100, 2518 AD
The Hague, The Netherlands

Introduction	Instructions, role & team profiles are given
Simulation	Participants engage in diplomacy, pursuing their “national” interests
Debriefing	The facilitators present their analysis and lead a plenary discussion

Participants

Our one-day conflict simulations cater to:

- Policy-makers working in the international security sector.
- Students studying International Relations, Area Studies, Conflict Resolution

Themes

Pax Ludens has developed three specific case studies:

- The Greater Middle East
- The Politics of Nuclear Proliferation
- The Caucasus: a cross-road of history and economics

w: paxludens.org/one-day_simulations
e: info@paxludens.org
t: +31(0)70 250 00 65

