Dear <<First Name>> <<Last Name>>,"

We proudly present to you our very first bi-monthly Pax Ludens newsletter. This bulletin comes at the start of a busy year for Pax Ludens, as we celebrate our second year in The Hague. In the past year we had the opportunity to work with many of you on inspiring projects. Projects which fit our mission and have helped organisations to learn and better understand the complexities of conflict management and the dynamics of International Relations. We did this with great enthusiasm, and as a result, more projects have started. Pax Ludens has grown and is ready for another year of exciting new initiatives. Staying close to our vision, we have developed a new strategy for further growth, are venturing into new territories such as sustainability and are creating new partnerships.

In this first newsletter we want to provide you with more information about some of the latest developments. We are happy to receive your feedback on what you would like to know about us and our projects, and are also eager to hear about new ideas! For this reason we kindly invite you to fill in our survey.

Sustainability and environmental security

We believe that a sustainable future depends on sustainable development and environmental security. That real change is created through personal experience. For this reason the concept of play is at the essence of all our programs.

We are currently developing several such new training programs on sustainability which seek to help decision-makers integrate this concept into their daily work environments. In our efforts to apply our techniques and methodologies to issues of sustainable development and environmental security, we are supported by various Dutch partners as well as by our new Milwaukee-based ally, the Greenman Alliance, an organization which is specialized in sustainable recruitment, workforce consulting and career advice. To kick-start our sustainability efforts and to celebrate our cooperation with the Greenman Alliance, we will contribute to the University of Wisconsin's "Earth Week" in April where we will deliver a keynote speech on "Water and International Conflict". We are also partnering with EXCEPT, a new company that specializes in integrated sustainability concepts and consulting.

New appointments

To help us develop the Pax Ludens sustainability branch, Sandra Vogt joined our team in February. Sandra is our new Project Assistant and will be responsible for developing new training programmes and updating existing simulations.

Our expert team has gained a new member. Paul van Hoof is an expert in "grand" strategy. Paul will contribute to our programmes on strategy design and implementation.

The newest member of the Pax Ludens board is Martijn Nuijten. Martijn is responsible for the development of Pax Ludens projects and programmes focusing on sustainable development and environmental security.

Website update

We are also pleased to announce the launch of our newly updated website www.paxludens.org which provides our partners and clients with a clearer picture of Pax Ludens' services and expertise. Downloadable brochures have been added to the "Services&Solutions" section of the website, describing new and established training programmes and simulations.

Take our survey

In our effort to monitor and improve our performance, we have developed a questionnaire on our services and products. As we are keen to find out what your opinion is on our organisation, please be so kind to complete our survey.

We look forward to your feedback and to working with you in the future.

Greetings from The Hague

The Pax Ludens Team
